By Itollefs on Wednesday, May 9, 2012

Several new articulation agreements have been implemented by the Business Department at the University of Minnesota, Crookston. Agreements were signed with Minnesota State Community and Technical College (MSCTC) in Fergus Falls, North Hennepin Community College in Brooklyn Park, Minn., and Saint Paul College, a community and technical college in St. Paul, Minn. The articulation agreements allow students with specific associate degrees in business an option to transfer to the Crookston campus to complete a baccalaureate degree.

Students earning associate of science degrees from MSCTC in accounting and business and those earning an associate of applied science degree from Saint Paul College in manufacturing technology have the option to continue their education at the U of M, Crookston in the Business Department.

Those earning associate degrees from North Hennepin Community College in accounting, business administration with a management concentration, business administration with a marketing concentration, and construction management along with those earning associate of applied science degrees in management, marketing, entrepreneurship, and finance management would also have the option to transfer to the Crookston campus.

Articulation agreements are formal arrangements transferring a defined set of academic credits between an academic program of one institution, usually a two-year post-secondary institution, to a program within a college or campus of the University of Minnesota system in order to fulfill general education or program requirements.
